For Congress

We are authorized to announce
HON. JAS. F. CLAY,
of Henderson county, as a candidate for Congress in this, the Second Congressional District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Democratic
District Convention.

We are authorized to announce
HON. THOS. S. PETTIT, of Daviess county, as a candidate for Congress in this, the Second Congressional District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Democratic
District Convention.

Cannon says Young is a deceiver, and Young says Cannon is a liar of the Mullahan school. They know each other.

The correct official vote in the Apppellate Clerkship race is as follows:
Henry, 115,081; Jacob, 75,404; Lusk,
4,392; Henry's majority over Jacob,
49,217.

Z. Fahrenheit Young says red is the prevailing color for ladies' stockings this season, and what we want to know is, how he found it out.

Capt. Harry L. Todd has been elected warden of the State prison, vice Capt. W. S. Stone resigned. He filled the position eight years, beginning in 1860.

The Mountain Scourer, published at West Liberty, Morgan county, has changed its name to the Licking Valley Scourer, and the paper has been considerably enlarged. It is one of the staunchest and ablest organs of the Eastern Democracy.

Mrs. Molie Martin, of this city, and Miss Julia Everett, of Maysville, were licensed last week as resident agents of an insurance company. This is the first time in the history of Kentucky that females have been licensed to solicit insurance.

All of the Louisville dailies, as well as nearly all of the most influential papers in the State, have declared for Knott for governor. Of course his own section will be solid for him, and it begins to look like the Lebanon statesman would have a walk-over.

The statement made last week that the proceeds of the Appellate Clerk's office, would be divided between Capts. Henry, Gaines and Poore, who have since learned was erroneous. Capt. Henry pays his two deputies salaries, the amounts of which he has not made public.

"Belle Boyd," now Mrs. Hammond, the notorious confederate spy of the Shenandoah Valley, was arrested in Philadelphia last week for victimizing various merchants, by passing bogus bills and forged checks. She was afterwards released, the money being made good by her friends.

The new Superior Court Judges upon organizing their court last week divided the term of four years into three parts, and decided by lot which should be the presiding judge for the respective terms. Judge Bowden will preside till Jan. 1, 1884; Judge Reid from that time till May 1, 1885; and Judge Richards the remainder of the term, or till Sept. 1, 1886.

Arkansas went Democratic, as usual in the State election last week. Vermont elected the Republican ticket by reduced majorities. Maine election took place yesterday, and the indications were that Plaisted, the present governor, would be re-elected by the Democrats and a part of the Greenbacks.

It is with unfeigned regret that we chronicle the suspension of the little Sunbeam, at Seabrook. Mr. C. C. Gleasons, the youthful, but sprightly editor, has finished his engagement for one year as editor, and the publication of the paper will cease. We will miss the bright face of our little sweetheart.

Mr. M. W. Larue, editor of the Sunday News, has been appointed press agent for the Louisville Exposition. He will please accept our eighteen karats thanks for a complimentary ticket to the exposition, which has already opened, and will continue until Oct. 21st.

Wm. Hallinan, the wealthy old German whom the Republicans of the first Indiana, (Evansville) District have elected to Congress for the last several terms, has again accepted the re-nomination, after having formally declined. Jno. J. Kleiner is the Democratic nominee and the race will be a lively one.

The delegate votes of the committee of this district have been fixed on the Hancock basis, and are as follows: Daviess 15; Christian 9; Hopkins 7; Union 10; Hancock 3; Webster 5; McLean 4.—(Madisonville Times).

There is also a county called Henderson in this district which has 11 votes. It is somewhere on the Ohio river. The total vote of the district 64 and not 63 as stated by the Owensboro Messenger. Any fraction over 32 votes will nominate.

A company has been organized to begin the publication of a new morning daily Democratic paper in Cincinnati. The capital stock is $200,000. The company is composed of 25 substantial men, among whom are Jno. C. Underwood, C. M. Clay, Jr., W. C. P. Breckinridge, Wm. Lindsey, Jas. W. Tate, J. M. Atterton, T. J. Megibben, M. C. Johnson and Garrett S. Wall, of this State.

Pettit for Congress.

The race for Congress is now made up, and as between Mr. Clay and Mr. Pettit, the South Kentuckian favors the latter. We have not one word to say against Mr. Clay's character as a gentleman, his standing as a lawyer, or his ability as a statesman. We will support Pettit, not that we love Clay less, but Pettit more. We are willing to concede that Mr. Clay is equal to Mr. Pettit in qualifications, and in his fidelity to the Democratic party, but there are reasons why Mr. Pettit should be nominated, and especially why Christian county should instruct for him, that are strong enough to be entitled to careful consideration. Mr. Pettit is in many respects the superior of any man in the State. As a reading clerk he has no superior in the United States, and as a parliamentarian, he is unquestionably the best in the State. He has succeeded at every thing he ever undertook and what he is to-day he took by storm. Allison, as usual, had singled out a young lady and had wandered down the valley to the spring, and they had seated themselves under a spreading tree and were having a season of courtship with all of the usual excitements. Slowly the twilight began to deepen until a long night had thrown her sable curtain round the world and pinned it with the stars; soon the cloud in the west began to increase in size, but Allison's thoughts were not of clouds and earthly things, but he continued to talk to the girl by his side, utterly oblivious of all terrestrial surroundings. An hour slipped by and nine o'clock had arrived, when Allison and his companion had arrived towards the hotel, several hundred yards away. Drop, drop, came the rain in drops as large as a hypocrite's tears and the lovers began to quicken their steps, but alas! it was too late. Faster, faster fell the rain drops until to escape a drenching they had to seek refuge in a little covered summer-house half way to the hotel. Here they went groping in the darkness and when they had reached the rain began to fall in torrents. There was but one small stool in the summer-house and Allison was called upon to solve the knotty problem of how two persons could occupy the same seat at one and the same time. Darker, darker, grew the night and the forked-tongued lightning began to flash with blinding vividness across the sky, which was as black as a Republic's politician's record.

If Allison leave the fair and fragile creature by his side? No! Wrapping his coat sleeve around her waist to protect her from the storm, he kissed away her tears and fears and remained at his post, without a murmur, for two long weary hours. Along towards eleven o'clock, Allison lit a cigar, and the glare of the match made known his whereabouts to his friends and caused a good Samaritan to go to his rescue with an umbrella. He was saved, but at what a cost! We have heard that persons have been known to pass through such fearful ordnals that their hair would turn white in a single night. Allison's hair had not turned white, but it was noticed by close observers that the left shoulder of his black coat had turned as white as chalk.

The war in Europe is beginning to look like blood was to be shed in earnest. The only general engagement since the war began has been begun and a battle will be fought probably in a day or two. Arabi has been trying to force Gen. Wolseley into an engagement for a week, and the latter has at last decided to risk a battle. When this is done the British will be whipped, as they are not in a condition to fight, for they are waiting for reinforcements, and many of the soldiers are sick. Arabi is proving himself to be a very shrewd general, and it appears that England has "bit off more'n she kin chaw." The Egyptians have raised the green flag and declared holy war. The Sultan has declared Arabi a rebel, but the latter hasn't let it effect his plans to any great extent.

Pettit will probably carry this county, but Clay's friends are hard at work and are boasting of victory. Mr. Pettit's speech here was not an oratorical flourish, but it was sensible, pointed and soundly Democratic. It is not always the best speaker who tickles the ear of the populace with spread eagle oratory and stale jokes.

The Coming Big Show.

The meeting of the Kentucky Press association at Ashland, in 1880, will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate as to attend. The numerous banquets, balls and excursions, which kept the boys in one continued whirlpool of gaiety and excitement, all contributed to make the meeting ever memorable to the frolicking quill drivers. It was at this meeting that we first met G. Allison Holland, the young paragrapher of the Eminent Constitutional, and it was while the young Constitutional, had his pocket-book was rising like a baker's yeast in the west. The vespering repast was over and the boys and girls were beginning to wander off in pairs to pick flowers on the mountain sides or seat themselves upon the benches that dotted the green campus here and there, like fly-pecks on hotel tables. Allison Holland, the hero of this sketch, was at that time a young and fascinating brunette with a homeopathic moustache and a two-weeks-old diploma in his pocket. To say that he was a ladies' man would be putting it mildly. He was the quintessence of gallantry, the incarnation of love and devotion and the ideal cavalier of the press gang. Whether gracefully bending over the mountain side, to pluck the wild flowers to bear them, in triumph to his lady love; or standing upon the rustic seat to ent her name high upon some "giant of the forest," telling the old story in whispered accents in some sequestered nook, "far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife" or stealing kisses in the tunnels and mines, he was the same gay Lothario, the same Beau Ideal of the sweet young ladies, whose hearts he took by storm. Allison, as usual, had singled out a young lady and had wandered down the valley to the spring, and they had seated themselves under a spreading tree and were having a season of courtship with all of the usual excitements.

The trial began Friday and the evidence was all heard that day. It was proven that Johnson had stolen a gun from old Isham Dulin, and the latter had threatened to prosecute him. On the night of Nov. 8, 1881, Henry Johnson left home with the gun on his shoulder; just before day on the following morning Isham Dulin was called up out of his bed and when he came to the door he was shot through the head and instantly killed. The old man lived alone and his lifeless body was found some hours afterwards. Johnson was suspected and when arrested confessed that he had called him out and said Ned Dulin, the old man's son, did the killing, because, as he said, the old man had driven him from his home. This was proven to be false and a clear case was made out against Johnson. The evidence left no room to doubt his guilt. Mr. Stites made a strong and concise speech of forty-five minutes after which Mr. Chapman made an excellent argument for the defendant. Mr. Gaines followed with one of his characteristic efforts and the case was given to the jury at 5 o'clock Saturday. They went out a short while and returned a verdict of guilty, fixing Johnson's punishment at confinement in the penitentiary for life.

Johnson is a very black boy, about 20 years old and has not a very bad face. He was proven guilty of a cruel and heartless murder and should have been hanged for his crime. It is no use to try to hang men in this country, no matter what they do. The juries are too chicken hearted to enforce the law.

One of the most awe inspiring feats of daring ever attempted in or out of the circus ring is the aerial bicycle ride of Mille Adelaide Allibis and Messrs. M. and L. Livingstone. They were both so described as the "bold and valiant navigators of the air setting at defiance all laws of gravitation and accomplishing the most miraculous mid air equitation ventures ever attempted by man or woman." It is something, indeed, to see these intrepid performers traversing a single wire on a bicycle at a dizzy and dangerous height from the ground and risking life and limb in the performance of feats that look like a reckless disregard of the commonest demands of self preservation. Truly one shudders at the recollection of it, and none will fail to see it on Thursday, Sept. 21.

What does Arabi say to his troops upon in the desert?

The sand which is there.

How do you know they have sandwiches there?

Because the Bible says the descendants of Ham were bred and mastered there.

What do they eat upon their sandwiches?

Butter.

How do you know they have butter there?

Because the Bible says when Lot's wife was turned into a pillar of salt, all the family but her ran into the wilderness.

All of which is accounted for by the presence of Sam Gaines in this city.—Yesterdays.

They loitered at the camp meeting and came in late. His coat near the shoulders bore conspicuous marks of bloom of youth about it. Her hair was disheveled and disarranged. When we called her attention to the situation, she blushed violently, but finally mustered up courage enough to say, "You know how it is yourself." We didn't know anything of the kind. We never went to camp meeting with her or any other girl, but then there isn't a more willing soul to learn all about it in four hundred and forty odd miles of here.—Madisonville Times.

The telegraphic dispatches bring the information that the Nile is rapidly rising and that a flood is imminent. The British were threatened with an Nile-a-ition as it were.—Loughville Mascotte.

Desiring to be different from the majority of civilized mankind, we will state that a few days ago we borrowed an umbrella from some one and have forgotten to remember from whom we borrowed it.—State Journal.

An aesthetic enthusiast remarks that "woman is the precious stone that caps the glory of creation." In some more honest precincts the boys have the same idea of some of them, but they call her the brim-stone—Glasgow Times.

Mr. Derrick, of Newport, has six teen living children. His name happily indicates that he is able to raise them.—Richmond Register.

A scientific exchange informs a wonder-struck world that "people who play with viriol must expect to get burnt." Any acid know that much.—Louisville Mascotte.

FOR LIFE.

Is the verdict in Henry Johnson's case.

One of the most important cases on the docket of the present term of Circuit Court was the case against Henry Johnson, Europa Vaughn and Ned Dulin, for murder. A ter examining into the case the Commonwealth's attorney decided to dismiss the charges against Vaughn and Dulin, and Johnson was then tried.

The court appointed as counsel for him Messrs. G. A. Champlin and Henry J. Stites, Jr.

The prisoner asked that he be tried by white men exclusively and the following jury was empaneled:

Thos Corbin, J. D. Lackhart, B. P. Jones, Jos. Duvall, J. P. Drake, Jas. Anderson, Mel. Young, J. G. Hord, Alex. Campbell, J. L. B. Johnson, W. H. Sizemore, W. H. Reader.

DIED.

PERKINS: At the residence of her nephew, Albert Jones, Esq., Grand View, Texas, September 6th, 1882, Mrs. Martha A. Perkins, in the 2d year of her age. She was born in Madison county, Va., April 28th, 1821, and removed with her parents, James and Lois Jones, to this county when a small child. She lived most of her life here and married James Perkins, who died some years afterwards, leaving her with one child. Some years ago she went with her son, C. J. Perkins, to Texas, and lived with him till his death, last December. Weighed down by her bereavement, she determined to return to this country, but she was taken sick and continued to grow worse until her death last week. She was a kind, plump, Christian woman and died in the full belief of a life of happiness beyond the grave. She leaves one brother and one sister, the last of a large family, to mourn her death.

J. C. & J. K. Gant Chosen by the County Grangemen to sell their Tobacco.

The Grangemen at Church Hill and Casky, in this county, by an overwhelming majority, elected, at their last meeting, the firm of J. C. & J. K. Gant to sell their tobacco this year, amounting to about 2000 bushels.

The Grangemen act as a unit in all such matters and the contract for selling the tobacco raised by two hundred of the most extensive growers in the county is no small matter.

The unprecedeted rush of advertisements has made it necessary for us to issue supplements throughout the month. Our columns were already crowded when the circuses came along and demanded eight columns of space. The hard, but we will try to bear it without murmuring.

Hopkinsville has never been so extensively filled as at this time. Every place to be had has been converted into a location for circus billboards, and small boards are even setting around on the pavements and leaning against trees and houses.

Mr. Fairleigh has offered his resignation as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Public Schools. He states that his reasons for so doing are purely personal, and not on account of any dissatisfaction.

IN DURANCE VILLE.

Are William and his Sweetheart for burglarizing Brandon's Jeweler Store.

The night of Aug. 25th, the jewelry store of G. H. Brandon, on Court street, was entered by burglars and rifled of about $400 worth of valuable. Mr. Brandon kept the master quiet and sent for Mr. R. M. Porter, an experienced detective, of Nashville, to come and work up the case. Mr. Porter set to work and on last Tuesday caused William Campbell and Edna Nance his mistress to be arrested. The girl had a pair of the bracelets on, which led to the detection of the guilty party. When arrested Campbell was taken to jail but the girl in explaining how she came in possession of the jewelry implicated Jim Garnett, Caesar Thomas and Henry Thomas, all of Roaring Springs. These parties were arrested and Nance stated that Henry Thomas gave the bracelets to her at nine o'clock on the evening of Aug. 25th. They proved that they did not get to town that night till 2 o'clock a. m. and Mr. Brandon proved that his store was not closed until after the hour named, and the robbery took place after it was closed. These and other facts exonerated the three boys arrested and they were released. Nance then confessed that Campbell gave the bracelets to her, but subsequently retracted the confession and stoutly denied it. While she was in the station house she was allowed to talk to some of her friends and they instructed her to "deny every thing and they would swear her clear." This conversation was heard by several parties who were stationed in an adjoining room to listen. The grand jury took up the case Friday and promptly indicted Campbell for burglary and Nance as accessory. It is believed that there are other guilty parties who will eventually be apprehended. Mr. Brandon has recovered but little of his stolen property, but he is confident he has the thieves and expects to have the satisfaction of seeing them sent to the penitentiary.

Jas. Buckner, col. was found guilty of grand larceny and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary for stealing a feather-bed from Herschel Porter, at Pembroke.

Jas. Buckner, col. was found guilty of grand larceny and was given a year and a half in the penitentiary for stealing a suit of clothes from Joel McPherson.

AMERICANS IN AUSTRALIA.

What the Colonials Think of American Enterprise—W. W. Cole's Mammoth Circus and Menagerie in the Antipodes.

(From the Auckland, New Zealand, Star.)

This is far and away the most ultra of every kind of that that has ever visited these colonies. Mr. Cole possesses the crown of all the great enterprisers for public amusement and instruction. He has swelled up in his circus, menagerie, and congress of living wonders the great varieties, beauty, skill, daring and graces of a hundred other rivals shows.

The extraordinary combination of wonder, collected at infinite pains and enormous expense from every quarter of the globe is a grand example of the enterprise, daring and grasp which are the prominent characteristics of Americans. The business capacity which can combine into one homogeneous whole such a heterogeneous collection of elements, transport it over wide seas and continents, and control the infinite infinites without a hitch, must be of a very high order, in fact, nearly allied to that genius which enabled Stanley to overcome the difficulties and surmount the obstacles of the terra incognita of Central Africa, and which makes the great commercial undertakings and amusements of the American people a modern revival of the splendors and marvels of the Roman Circus Maximus of the elder Tarquin, Julius Caesar, and Augustus, without their barbarities, but transcending them in elegance, variety and perfection of training.

There is nothing like it in the world, and it is enough to satisfy and astonish the most exacting. The menagerie alone is worth a hundred books of natural history for purposes of education; the performances of the animals are remarkable proofs of man's supremacy over the brute creation; while the feats performed in the arena, display to perfection the adaptability of the human frame, and the triumphs of physical training. We might write a volume on this exhibition, but it would fail to convey anything like an adequate idea of its merits. It must be seen to be appreciated as it deserves. Cole's gigantic shows have recently returned from an extended tour in foreign countries and with a perfect flood of fresh features will give exhibitions in Hopkinsville on Thursday, Sept. 21.

The Safest Way.

The safest and surest way to restore the youthful color of the hair is furnished by Parker's Hair Balsam, which is deservedly popular from its superior cleanliness.

Married.

DUDLEY—LAYNE: At the residence of the bride's father, near Fairview, Tuesday, Sept. 5th, Dr. H. W. Dudley to Miss Lizzie Layne. The bride is a sister of Mr. Calvin G. Layne and a daughter of Mr. Howard Layne, of the eastern part of the county. She is a young lady of many admirable traits of character. Beautiful, intelligent and accomplished, she was the reigning belle of the Fairview vicinity.

The groom, a young physician, was formerly a resident of this county, but now lives at Hillsboro, Texas, where he has built up a large and lucrative practice in his profession.

The young couple left immediately for their home in the West, attended by the best wishes of a large circle of friends. May they ever realize the full fruition of their fondest hopes of happiness.
